SEA COAST ECHO

Aerospace company Relativity is expanding its rocket component production and rocket engine testing operations at NASA's Stennis Space Center in Hancock County. The project is a $59-million corporate investment and will create 190 jobs, increasing employment at Relativity's Stennis Space Center site to 200 workers.

Relativity's announcement today solidifies Hancock County's position as a leader in commercial space activity and further establishes our aerospace cluster as one of the strongest in the region," said Blaine Lafontaine, President, Hancock County Board of Supervisors.

Relativity is the first and only company to integrate metal 3D printing, robotics and software to build and launch rockets in days instead of years. The company develops its own launchers and rocket engines for commercial orbital launch services. In addition to expanding Stennis Space Center's E4 Test Complex with a build-out of four additional upgraded test cells, Relativity has secured an agreement with NASA for an exclusive lease of building 9101, a 220,000-square-foot facility with an 80-foot-high bay and strong industrial capability. This will enable the company to build its patented autonomous rocket factory in Hancock County and integrate its production and testing operations into one space, reducing lead time to launch.

"We are excited to partner with the Mississippi Development Authority to bring our patented 3D printing rocket platform to Hancock county," said Jordan Noone, cofounder and CTO of Relativity. "We look forward to working together to bring

BWSD board revisits reading scores, debates admin 'retreat'

Trustees discuss apparent 'transparency' versus 'misleading information'

BY CASSANDRA FAVRE
STAFF WRITER

The Bay-Waveland School District Board of Trustees heard from a local family about the board's recent approval of an administrative retreat to Orange Beach.

At the May 13 meeting, the board approved the "$5,000 retreat" with a 3-2 vote. Trustees Casey Favre, Vicki Arnold, and Ann Lathrop voted "yes." Trustees Mark Kidd and Mike Bell voted "no."

Schylar Wiecek spoke to the board about the matter, the district's overall grade, and the results of the third-grade reading tests.

Wiecek said that although the board already approved the matter, she wanted to share "what seems to be a pretty common opinion on the matter."

"I think that when you are working in a state that is 46th in the nation in education and in a district that is 'C' rated and did not even make the top ten for our own state when it came to the percentage of third-graders who passed the reading test, an administrative overnight retreat at a beach hotel using tax-allocated education funds should not even be up for conversation," she said. "In an email entitled 'admin retreat,' which she (Reed) sent to mem-

Dress code drama at board meeting

BY CASSANDRA FAVRE

The Bay-Waveland School District Board of Trustees on Monday heard from the Wiecek family about the district's new dress code policy.

During public comments where speakers are allowed three minutes, Scott Wiecek said he is a parent of three children who attend the BWSD.

"My wife and I think the teachers are excellent, the facilities are top-notch, and really the staff from the front office to the lunchroom have just been

Loiacano enshrined in the Sports Hall of Fame

BY JOSEPH W. GEX, II
STAFF WRITER

Sometimes when something takes a little more time than seems necessary, the result is simply so much sweeter. Without a doubt, that is the case with the recent induction of J.E. Loiacano in the Gulfport Sports Hall of Fame on Saturday evening at the Lyman Community Center.

Loiacano, a former grid-iron great on the field and behind the headset as a coach, commented, "I am greatly humbled by the honor. Seeing all the support from the Hall of Fame Committee and, most importantly, my former players tonight, it brings tears to my eyes. The support we had in Gulfport when I coached here was outstanding just as the support is tonight. This is a first class event and I am honored to be a part of it."

Loiacano was a star player for the St. Stanislaus Rock-a-friendly and really the best,” he said. “We really appreciate that and it seems like they go the extra mile. But it seems like there has been a problem with the school board, especially to somebody like me, who hasn’t really attended these meetings before, but kind of keep our eye on the newspapers and it seems there has been a lot of strange press coverage, starting maybe with the mysterious resignation in 2018.”

Scott Wiecek also said that there was a “lack of diversity on the school board,” and that “especially in a district that’s a ‘C’ rated district, it probably would benefit from a school board that reflects the community.”

Scott Wiecek said that, in reference to the uniform policy, “possibly the uniform change, and I’m speculating here, but it seems like it would be directly a reflection of having all this law enforcement-type influence on the school board, which has resulted now in uniforms that seem like they’re similar to a correctional institution, which can be very oppressive feeling to children.”

Wiecek also said there was a “downgrade in the food quality, which could also seem like it reflects a correctional institution.”

He said that could be why parents and teachers “complain about the lack of focus during the school day.”

“Especially when you start off with a breakfast of powdered sugar doughnuts and expect a kid to maintain that energy level throughout the school day,” he said. “And those fruit smoothies, which contain upwards to 100 grams of sugar.”

At the end of his allotted three-minutes, Wiecek mentioned the “nepotism thing.”

Schyler Wiecek, whose name appeared on Monday’s agenda, spoke next and had 15 minutes to speak to the board. Speakers who are listed on the agenda have a 15 minute time limit.

Schyler Wiecek said that one way she does not believe parents in the district are being “heard or respected is with the implementation of this new, even more strict dress code.”

Wiecek said she met with BWSD Superintendent Dr. Sandra Reed a few weeks ago and asked, “why take something that isn’t broke and create hardships for families when there really is no need.”

“The answer I did receive was perplexing,” Schyler Wiecek said. “Her answer was ‘that it wasn’t fine.’”

Wiecek said she asked, “what wasn’t fine.”

“Her response was this, ‘I’m sure you’re aware that we’re a ‘C’ district, the only ‘C’ district on the Coast and we are making every effort to change that and to bring the level of education that we offer kids up, and I believe that starts with self-respect and just a more, I hate to use the word, appropriate school presentation,’” Schyler Wiecek said.

Schyler Wiecek said she asked if Reed thought that changing what the students wore would affect test scores and learning?

“And she responded with, ‘I don’t know about their test scores, but their learning, yes,’” Schyler Wiecek said.

Schyler Wiecek said she was “astonished” by Reed’s statement and asked again, “so changing the colors of Navy blue to Royal blue is going to have an effect on their learning?”

“And she responded with, ‘well, I don’t know if the color will as much, but I think that the consistency, the uniformity, the most formalized approach, and we are going to do this with the staff as well, I think from the top down, it will be helpful,’” Schyler Wiecek said. “I responded with, ‘if the color doesn’t matter, then why are we doing it? But I never really got an answer for that.’”

Schyler Wiecek said she and other parents felt “scammed” by the district.

She said that many parents had purchased school-approved t-shirts and sweatshirts, “under the impression that they would be able to wear them the following school year, because they were considered school-approved and allowed under our dress code.”

“I informed her that the prices of those shirts were $10-12 each and sweatshirts were $20 to $25 each,” Schyler Wiecek said. “And many parents, including myself, bought more than one item for each of our school children, which quickly adds up, but since they could wear them again, or at least that’s what we were under the impression of, we bit the bullet, shelled out the money so that our kids could have something non-uniform to wear that was more comfortable and not as hot as the polo shirts.”

She said that she was receiving orders for shirts up until two weeks prior to the end of the school year, “when the board already knew they would be changing the dress code and were not first notifying the parents that their children would be able to wear these shirts next year.”

Schyler Wiecek said she asked Reed if the district had decided on the uniform change two weeks prior to the end of the school year. She added that the PTO informed her that the students would be allowed to wear the clothes during the next school year.

“Mrs. Reed replied, ‘we were in the process of revamping the uniform policy,’” Schyler Wiecek said. “I told her that I didn’t agree with that, that I don’t think they should have been allowed to do that. She said, ‘I don’t know if they should have been allowed to send them home, perhaps a note that said there’s a possible change in dress code could have been helpful.’”

Schyler Wiecek said that would have been “the better option.”

“We have lots of parents that bring home sometimes less than $200 per week and $20 on a shirt can make or break someone’s rent payment or utility bill,” Schyler Wiecek said. “She replied that ‘school isn’t the only place they can wear those shirts.’”

Schyler Wiecek addressed the jacket policy. She stated that as it’s written on the BWSD’s Facebook post about the uniforms, it says “that you cannot wear,” and there’s nowhere that says “you can wear a regular-colored jacket to school.”

Deputy Superintendent Monty Noblitt said Monday that students could wear regular jackets to and from school, but not on the school campus.

Noblitt added that students could wear a dress code compliant sweatshirt under their jackets.

Schyler Wiecek said that the Pass Christian and Long Beach school districts do not implement uniform policies.

“And yet, they consistently continue to perform better than us every year,” she said. “Pass Christian was an ‘A’ rated district last year and has been in the top five in the state for the past five years. Long Beach schools have the highest passing percentage of third-graders for our state reading test on the whole Mississippi coast. Yet, the children can wear regular, every day clothing and, shockingly, it seems to not affect their learning at all.”

 She added that she polled parents in those districts about the free-dress policy. She said that parents said that they have had “no issues and they have a zero-tolerance bullying policy.” She said that one former teacher in the Pass Christian School District said that it was “easier” to deal with “free dress” than when they taught in schools with a uniform policy.
 Schyler Wiecek said that she has also searched for scientific articles that would show a “direct scientific correlation between uniforms and grades or test scores.”
 “And I was unable, after reading about 35 of them and hundreds of pages of literature, to find any with concrete evidence that uniforms in fact create better learners and better grades,” she said. “There was however, evidence showing that uniforms can help with behavior problems and attendance. But BWSD doesn’t have a problem with attendance, we have an academic issue. To me, after meeting with Ms. Reed personally, I believe there is a true lack of understanding and empathy towards the families and children in our community and the problems that they face every day.”
 She said that Reed told her that there are ways to help low-income families with obtaining uniforms.
 “She told me that the parents would need to come into the school and speak to a school counselor about their financial need so that the school could provide them with the uniform help using government grants,” Schyler Wiecek said. “I was truly saddened by this. As a court-appointed special advocate for children in Hancock County, I can tell you that there are many parents that are truly in need of assistance that don’t receive it because of their pride and the level of embarrassment and feelings of ostracization that are felt when, as an adult parent, you are forced to come into the school to confess your lack of financial stability to another adult in a position of power. I reminded Ms. Reed that this is not St.

Stanislaus, this is a public school. And I asked her, ‘do you understand that sometimes parents that live in low-income neighborhoods might not feel comfortable enough to come to y’all and say that they need help because they feel they may be judged?’”
 Schyler Wiecek said that Reed told her that, “I think we have a good enough relationship with our families that they don’t feel like that, for the most part.”
 “Again, I was shocked that the superintendent of a school district would make such a generalized blanket statement about the relationship between her and the families in the community,” Schyler Wiecek said.
 As CASA volunteer, she said, she is “personally involved” with many of the community’s “struggling” families.
 “I can tell you here right now, that many of them do not know Ms. Reed and have never spoken to her at all and they feel a lack of representation on our school board,” Schyler Wiecek said. “It seems as though BWSD is so focused on having an exceptional and almost militaristic outward appearance that they are forgetting the whole point of education, that is to learn and be prepared for the next stage of their lives. This is a public school, not a jail. Yet the strict uniform policy and random drug testing policy would make you think otherwise.”
 During board comments, Trustee Mike Bell thanked the Wieceks and said that he “shared” their “sentiments.”
 Trustee Casey Favre also commented on the Wieceks’ statements.
 He first addressed the “law enforcement influence,” and “the food quality, which could also seem like it reflects a correctional institution.”
 “I don’t think it’s my job, as a school board member, to dictate what food we serve in our school cafeterias,” Favre said. “I have had no contact with anybody on the administrative staff regarding any of those policies. It is none of my business.”
 Favre also said that he felt it important to address the “nepotism.”
 “So nepotism is when one family member conveys a financial benefit to another family member,” Favre said.
 Schyler Wiecek said that it’s “a consolidation of power.”

 “To create an influence where you have a lot of like-minded people, it’s actually worth more than the salary that you probably won’t miss,” Scott Wiecek said.
 Schyler Wiecek added that, “when you make a direct change on the school board because of a consolidation of power, that’s nepotism.”
 Scott Wiecek added that the opinion of the community is that it is a direct violation of Mississippi codes.
 Board attorney Ronnie Artigues said that he would “disagree.”
 In addition to himself, Artigues said that Bay St. Louis attorney Heather Smith, the Ethics Commission, and the Attorney General found no violation.
 “As far as it being a conflict of interest, there isn’t any,” Artigues said.
 With regards to the dress code policy, Favre said, the district conducted a survey several years ago.
 “And 92 percent of our staff members said that uniforms were a problem,” Favre said. “Enforcing the dress code took away from their instruction time.”
 The Wieceks said that they “totally agree.”
 “I’m going to say that it is an issue,” Favre said. “It is a problem in our schools. We set out from the very beginning, saying if we’re going to have a uniform policy, it needs to be a uniform uniform policy. If we’re not going to have a uniform policy then we’re all for it.”

Scott Wiecek asked, “didn’t you just say you didn’t have any say so at all?”
 Favre said that administrators approved the dress code.
 “No one on the administrative team was dead set that we were going to have a uniform policy,” Favre said. “However, faced with polls from parents in Pass Christian and Long Beach don’t really serve us well. What would serve us well, is that if you get 51 percent of the parents in the BWSD to sign a petition and say ‘we don’t uniforms.’”
 The Wieceks said that they “were starting one tomorrow.”
 Favre said the board would evaluate the results of such a petition. He added that a “Facebook poll” is not a petition.
 Favre said he had three phone calls about the situation, and heard complaints that children would have to wear their uniforms on game days.

 “We fixed that part of the problem,” Favre said.
 Later in the meeting, the board approved changes to the policy: Shorts and pants will include navy blue color; Bay High School students will be allowed to wear school-sponsored t-shirts every Friday; and Bay-Waveland Middle School and Bay High School students will be allowed to wear either the team uniform or the team shirt (approved by the principal) on game day of each activity.
 “I think the district has done a phenomenal job in making concessions to come to a consensus that we have a uniform policy,” Favre said.
 Favre said that the district has “the opportunity to assist families in need.”
 Scott Wiecek said that “none of the parents are aware.”
 Favre said it’s in the handbooks.
 “Well you need to do a better job of letting the community know,” Scott Wiecek said.
 With regards to financial hardships, Favre said that, “if you don’t feel inclined to come to the school district and ask for help, there are organizations like Hope Haven that provide help. Jacob’s Well will provide help. Goodwill provides uniforms at discount prices.”
 Schyler Wiecek began to ask Favre if he had been uniform shopping at Goodwill.

 “I let you speak and this is my opportunity to do so,” Favre said.
 Favre added that the BWSD uniform policy is “less strict” than Hancock High School’s policy.

 The next board meeting is scheduled for July 8 at 5:30 p.m.

A memorable Father's Day

When I am at my best, I am my father's daughter." — Jean Nette

This Father's Day will perhaps be the most meaningful for me.

For the past six Father's Days, I've honestly worried that it would be the last I would get to spend with my Daddy.

Although dialysis is a life-saving method, it does not cure renal failure. This medical technology makes it possible for not only my father, but for countless others, to live life while waiting for a transplant.

When it became clear that a living donor was not a possibility, it became a waiting game for someone else to pass away and donate his or her organs.

That is one of the hardest things I struggle with mentally, as I'm sure it is for my father. Someone had to pass away in order for my father to live.

It's now been almost three months since someone gave the gift of life to my daddy and I think about their family every day, even though I don't know who they are.

The organ donation centers alerts the family as to how many people received the gift of life from their loved one. I hope that brings them some comfort in their time of loss.

My dad, Curtis, (I'm sure a lot of you readers, if you grew up in the Bay, may know him and many think I look like him), has always been there for me, instilled in me a diligent work ethic, and taught me how to be a good human being. Which is still a work in progress. But I believe in remaining teachable up until the end of our lives. We truly don't or won't know everything. Someone once told me that "A smart person will never tell you they're smart."

In recent years, my dad has become a softy. But, growing up, I remember how firm he could be with my sister and me.

One summer, my parents had planned a trip to Disney World. Well, not too long before we were expected to leave, my sister took my glasses and hid them. I am severely near-sighted so I was unable to see very clearly.

My mom called my dad at work and he told us that if those glasses weren't produced by the time he got home, he would cancel our Disney trip.

My sister and I both knew this wasn't an empty promise. When my parents made a promise like that, they kept it.

Not too long after, my sister "found" my glasses and we took our trip to Disney World.

During my college years, Dad was my confidante and Safe sleep protects infants from Sudden Infant Death Syndrome

There are many reasons why Mississippi parents sleep with their infants. Sometimes new parents are just so sleep-deprived they feel they cannot get up after feeding and put the baby in his or her own bed.

This despite doctors' warnings to put babies to sleep alone, on their backs, in their own bed and on a firm surface, without blankets or pillows or anything else in the bed.

It seems baked into our culture that sleeping with an infant is a benefit of parenthood. Or that it is acceptable because "my mother slept with all of us."

The truth is babies who are put to bed with their parent(s) or siblings are far more likely to die in their first few months of life. And a lot of babies are dying in Mississippi. We still have the highest infant mortality rate in the US, about 17 times the rate of the nation overall.

A study of almost 2,000 infant deaths in ten states across the US in May's JOURNAL OF PEDIATRICS found that unintentional suffocation is the leading cause of injury for preventable deaths among Sudden Unexpected Infant Deaths or SUIDs. And accidental suffocation or strangulation in bed was the number one cause of suffocation deaths of babies.

Parents sleeping with a baby in an adult bed and accidentally rolling over on the baby, or in some other way accidentally suffocating the baby, is most apt to happen when the baby is under one month old. As the baby's lungs get stronger and the baby is able to move more, the risk of the infant dying from co-sleeping lessens.

A small baby in an adult bed, or in a crib with pillows and blankets, can also be at risk of suffocation and death even if the baby is alone in the bed. If a baby turns his head into the pillow or blanket, or is put on his stomach, carbon dioxide can fill the space around the baby's mouth and nose and the baby can suffocate. PEDIATRICS found that infants who are most at risk of suffocation and death are babies put to bed with soft bedding, on their stomachs. The risk is greatest for infants under four months old.

Older infants who can move more and begin to flip over are most at risk of dying by being wedged between the mattress and the wall or a person in an adult bed. Babies put to sleep in a recliner or on an over-upholstered chair can also get wedged between the back and seat of the chair and suffocate.

Other medical research has associated obesity with SUIDs. A co-sleeping parent who weighs over 200 pounds can double the risk for death of their infant. Parents who use drugs and alcohol before getting in bed with an infant also increase the likelihood of their baby dying.

Even knowing all this, it is often hard to convince brand-new parents not to Forests need help after disasters

Forests play a vital role in contributing to the health of Mississippi's environment and the wealth of the local economies surrounding them.

Across America, hurricanes, tornadoes, and wildfires destroy thousands of forested acres each year, devastating both conservation areas and timberlands. Forest landowners managing for timber often lose decades of tree growth and must scramble to salvage what's fallen before insects and diseases claim their product.

What they salvage is worth pennies compared to the fair market value of their timber before the natural disaster. Like communities, forests, too, must be restored. Yet, no federal program provides assistance to landowners for the economic loss of timber.

Forestland destroyed by natural disaster is owned primarily by families who use their property as an investment for retirement, to send kids and grandchildren to college, and to supplement their income. However, the current law does not help but instead penalizes these landowners.

To address the issues within the current framework, the Forest Recovery Act, H.R. 1444 was introduced in the U.S. House of Representatives. The Act provides immediate relief to forest landowners by amending the tax code to allow them to deduct the full market value of their timber prior to the loss caused by a disaster. Under current tax law, landowners are only allowed to deduct the lesser amount of the fair market value, the cost basis, or the adjusted timber basis. Unfortunately, the deduction amount typically is $0.

This is challenging for forest landowners because in most cases their timber becomes marketable 25 to 40 years after being planted. Forest landowners must pay expenses, including annual taxes, without crop income during this entire growth cycle.

The Forest Recovery Act will help America's forest landowners rebound from the devastation of their forests after natural disasters. It's a necessity if landowners are to remain economically viable and keep their land in forest use.

The Act is not a subsidy or transfer of funds program. It simply allows landowners to deduct the fair market value of timber destroyed due to natural disasters. This fix would provide permanent assurances to landowners when their timber crops are destroyed by a natural disaster.

Without economic relief provided to forest landowners after a natural disaster, the public and environmental benefits provided by forests will begin to decline as natural disasters occur more frequently across the country.

This common-sense policy would provide forest owners the security of knowing their 25 to 40-year investment in growing healthy forests will not be a complete economic loss if a natural disaster strikes. Providing incentives to keep land in forest use generates environmental benefits for both rural and urban communities.

bers of the school board, ‘as you know we have worked hard this year and would like to take the staff to a relaxed setting to work through some of the issues we encountered during the school year.’”

She added that she “reminded” Ms. Reed about the 46th placement of the state in the nation, the ‘C’ district rating, and that the “third-grade reading scores had dropped from 91.8 percent passing rate to a staggering 77.9 percent rate in 2019.”

“And I asked her that it is unclear to me and any other parent what exactly it is that we should be rewarding?” Wiecek said. “Ms. Reed responded with, ‘I don’t think we are rewarding anything, and in hindsight, I probably made a mistake in using the word retreat. That probably was not the right word to use. I mean it’s going to be a working leadership-type workshop.’”

Wiecek said she still questioned why taxpayer dollars needed to be spent on an overnight “beach trip” instead of going “to our children’s education.” Wiecek said she asked Reed why the workshop could not be held in Hancock County.

She said that Reed said, “there’s really not a reason it can’t be held here, I just think it could be done more productively in a setting that will enable administrative staff to have a better working relationship so we can provide the best education possible.”

Wiecek said that, “for the rest of us, including the teachers who are the ones that work very hard every day with our students, want to bond with the people we know and work with, we have to do that using money out of our paychecks and not the hard-earned tax dollars of people in our community.”

“For example, the $11,000 hotel bill that was emailed by her (Reed) to the school board, which Ms. Reed has now told me was just used as a comparable, could be used on hiring a literacy coach to come in during a professional development workshop with the admin here at home to provide them with resources and materials to pass onto to our third grade teachers that would help our children pass the new reading test,” Wiecek said. “Because honestly, the excuse that this is a new test with harder requirements to pass, doesn’t really hold for me, when the amendment for the Literacy-Based Promotion that changed our third-grade reading test to what it is today, was done back in 2016. Yet, it took our district two to three years to prepare for this test.”

Wiecek said that the funds could also be used to bring a music program to the elementary schools.

“I think the use of these funds for this purpose is shameful, at best, when we are lacking anything near the academic standards set by other states in our nation who consistently score better than that of the state of Mississippi,” Wiecek said. “This district needs to take a step back and focus on what’s really important here, and that is ensuring these parents and our community, that their children will graduate from our district prepared to take on life and become successful members of society. And I would like to personally thank board member (Mark) Kidd for his transparency.”

During her superintendent’s report, Reed gave a summary of the district’s third-grade reading test results.

“Just as a point of clarification,” she said. “It’s not a new test, it’s the same test, as Mrs. Wiecek mentioned, that was implemented in 2016. The only difference is that in prior years, passing was achieved at a Level 2 and this year the passing rate was raised to a Level 3.”

Reed said there were 32 students who did not pass the first time and said that the state gave the students four days before taking the retest.

“We brought assistants, we brought the teachers from Waveland, we tutored those kids pretty much one-on-one for four days,”

Reed said. “The second time that we gave the test, an additional 17 passed. So that left us with 15 third-graders that did not pass. Of the 15, 10 of them will be what we refer to as ‘good caused.’ In other words, they will be placed in the fourth grade for good cause.”

Nicole Menotti, director of the district’s curriculum and instruction, said good cause references students with disabilities, “which is our main category.”

“And they’ve already been retained and are receiving intervention services,” Menotti said.

Menotti said that the third-graders are in summer school at Waveland Elementary.

“We had three good cause students that passed on their own without us having to good cause them,” she said. “Our thought is, we want to keep working with them to where they do pass on their own.”

Reed said that while good cause is “helpful for some students. You can’t help but get the feeling that when you good cause a student, that you don’t have a lot of confidence in them. That you’re almost telling them ‘we don’t think you can do it, so we’re going to good cause you.’ So we’re going to hold off on that.”

Reed said that there are five more students who will take the second third-grade reading retest and all are enrolled in summer school at Waveland Elementary.

“For the first time, we have a summer school program at Waveland,” she said.

Reed said the district interacted with all the parents of the students who did not pass the first reading test.

“All 32 parents agreed to enroll their child(ren) in summer school,” Reed said. “So we have all 32 students in summer school. Even though 17 of them passed the second time, what that tells us is that if they didn’t pass the first time, but passed the second time, they were very close.”

Reed said the district is currently sitting at a pass rate of “91.2” percent.

“The state average today is 82.8,” Reed said.

Reed also said the district received a $150,000 grant, $50,000 a year for literacy.

“What we’re doing is a literacy-based program at Waveland,” she said. “We’re partnering with INFINITY Science Center and doing a literacy-based program for our K-2 students this summer at Waveland.”

During board comments, Trustee Mike Bell thanked the Wieceks and said that he “shared their sentiments.”

Trustee Favre also commented on the Wieceks’ statements.

“Regarding the comment, thanking Mr. Kidd for his transparency,” Favre said. “What was done on Facebook wasn’t transparent. That was a misrepresentation of the facts.”

Kidd said that, “it looked like it came straight out of the information that I got from my board book.”

Favre told Kidd that he “also had an opportunity to speak and chose not to.”

“I can speak whenever I feel like it,” Kidd said.

Favre said, “no, it’s my turn.”

“Regarding his transparency, it was a misinformed document out to the public,” Favre said. “The document that was put out to the public was a comparable. It was meant to show that the administrative retreat was, in fact, price-shopped out.”

Schyler Wiecek said that she was told it was a comparable when she spoke to Reed.

“So if you put bad information out there, you’re putting out complete crap,” Favre said. “You’re not being transparent, you’re stirring the pot for no purpose and no good for the school district.”

“I’ll do it again,” Kidd said.

Schyler Wiecek replied with, “thank you.”

“It’s not a school board member’s job to operationalize the decisions made on the school board,” Favre said. “It’s not their job to put things into place, that’s the superintendent’s job. To put out misinformation is a gross overstepping of board members and in violation of the board member code of ethics.

Before you get up here and assert that so and so is transparent, do some fact-checking.”

Schyler Wiecek said, “that’s my opinion and I’m an American citizen and I can say what I feel.”

“Making the decision to not support an administrative retreat, minutes before that, my board member colleagues tried to hire a construction manager for $70,000, $80,000 over proposed project costs,” Favre said. “It’s not always about saving the almighty dollar, and if that’s the picture they’re painting, that’s not accurate.”

The next board meeting is scheduled for July 8 at 5:30 p.m.

I could tell him about mostly all the shenanigans I was up to and he wouldn’t judge or shame me. He knew I was making some of my first adult decisions and would have to learn how to live with the consequences, whether good or bad.

He is definitely a funny guy and always makes us laugh. Since the transplant, that laughter is coming back more and more, which makes me happy to see.

We often take our fathers for granted and for the past six years, I’ve tried not to, but I’m definitely not as good at it as I would like to be.

Not only do I owe it to my father, but also the donor family. I feel like I would be wasting their gift of life if I didn’t.

For those who have lost their fathers, I hope that your memories are as warm as mine and keep you comforted this Father’s Day.

For those mothers and fathers who fulfill both roles, I salute you.

For those who have absentee fathers, I hope there is someone in your life that you can look up to. A parental and caring figure is not always blood-related.

I will remember this Father’s Day as more special than any of the others I’ve shared with my Daddy over the past 36 years. This is the year I got my father back.

put their baby in bed with them. What works better is to talk with the mother several times while she is pregnant about the importance of safe sleep.

The Mississippi Department of Health’s

Southern Region is using a Fetal and Infant Review protocol to try to identify parents who need extra services to help improve the health and safety of their new babies. Safe sleep is an important part of their message. The six coast counties have seen a significant drop in infant deaths since this project was implemented.

Other states that have expanded Medicaid can follow women through their “fourth trimester” to give care and guidance when new mothers may need it most. Mississippi could extend Medicaid for fourth trimester coverage with a Medicaid waiver. Even if we did just that one thing, we would almost certainly see our high infant mortality rate start to go down.

STUFF: Use it or lose it!

Yes the spillway water is everywhere, but we are still fishing just about every single day. The summer time squalls have cut

A few of our trips shorter than normal, but happy to report, for now the fishing has been picking up. Everyday this past week, we have seen more and more schools of bait, and fish. Even been catching some really nice speckled trout! Still having to stay sharp, and make sure everything stays working correctly.

I was on the water recently and accidentally flipped my running light switch on. Immediately I noticed my stern light was out. Luckily, with the amount of debris in the Mississippi Sound, we have have not been running out before sunrise. Had I not flipped that switch on accident though, I wouldn't have known that light was blown.

This brings me to my point, check your stuff, FREQUENTLY. When I'm on the boat, or going on a pier. I try to make a habit of checking my gear. When

by Capt. Sonny Schindler

we are fishing every single day, I get worn down, and forget. After I noticed my stern light was out, I started flipping every switch in the boat. Of the umpteen million other lights, pumps and accessories, I found out 4 other things were not working. They were all things I seldom use, but it very was humbling, and really kinda scary.

I'm the king of breaking stuff, even when I'm not using it. Every chance you can, please check your pumps, lights, bubblers, pliers, reels, etc. Often times our stuff breaks from NOT being used. The salt and heat can corrode and ruin just about anything you put you near it. Remember folks, if you don't use it, you lose it.

MARCELLA LANEAUX, OF BAY ST. LOUIS, CAUGHT A 35-INCH BLACK DRUM WHILE FISHING ON THE WASHINGTON STREET PIER ON SATURDAY, JUNE 8. "I USED A DEAD SHRIMP AND A LITTLE BITTY GOLD HOOK ON AN AMBASSADOR FISHING POLE," SHE SAID. "IT WAS HARD TO GET IT – I HAD TO GET A NET TO BRING IT IN."

chaws from 1957-59 before taking his talent to Pearl River Junior College.

Under the legendary Dobie Holden, Loiacano became a first team All-American as a linebacker/running back in the days before free substitution in the game. Holden left indelible words seared on Loiacano's psyche which were, "You have to prove your worth every time out."

After PRJC, Loiacano found himself dressing in the Maroon and White of Mississippi State University. In Starkville, Loiacano proved himself again worthy of distinction as a linebacker and running back earning All-SEC honors on defense.

He was drafted into the United Football League and played two seasons with Canton and Philadelphia before a knew injury sidelined the star. He was named All-League both years.

Having retired from playing the game, he still could not get the game out of his system. He turned to coaching and tried to make it as fun for his players as it was for him.

His first coaching job was as an assistant for Lance Lumpkin at Bay High School. He spent a few seasons as an assistant before he was named head coach at Bay High School.

His rise to the head job in 1970 occurred at a crucial time when integration was happening throughout the Southeast. Closer to home, it was the combining of Valena C. Jones High School and Bay High School.

Loiacano recalled, "It was certainly a difficult time at that point in our history but the transition was extremely smooth. Zeke Bradley at VCJ was an outstanding individual and was very dedicated. He was a tremendous asset to the success we had at Bay High."

He spent four seasons as head coach at Bay High before taking the head job at Gulfport East High School.

As Loiacano tells it, when he went to Gulfport East he worked for the very best athletic director anyone could ask for in Lindy Callahan. Loiacano simply stated, "Coach Callahan was extremely instrumental in our success. He performed the AD job the way it should be done. He was always concerned with what Gulfport could do to make us successful. The support of the administration, the city and the citizens was outstanding."

For three seasons, Loiacano led Gulfport East going 4-6 in 1974, 7-3 in 1975 and 9-1 in 1976. Loiacano stated, "We were never short on leadership with those teams. When we came in we set the groundwork to be successful and built from there. The players were very athletic to begin with and we just sharpened their skills. They were so responsive to what we were doing and they soaked it up. We did our best to make it fun for them and they really took to it."

For the 1977-78 school year, Gulfport consolidated Gulfport East and Gulfport High School into one school due to the expenses of running two schools. Integration had already happened by this time in Gulfport but it was a very similar situation because neither school body really got along with the other one. Loiacano was selected to be the head coach and, again, found himself combining programs. Loiacano recalled, "This was something that the City of Gulfport had been preparing for over the previous couple of years. They knew it was coming and they were prepared for it. The combining of the schools was very easy as they had everything worked out. We had great leadership in the locker room much like we had great leadership in the school system."

Joseph Adams was Loiacano's star quarterback at Gulfport East and was also enshrined with his coach on Saturday night. Adams recalled, "I remember moving up to the varsity team and thought we would be just receiving our equipment in the off-season and that would be it. Boy, was I wrong. Coach had a complete off-season regimen for us and we learned quickly to fall in or you fall out. He was an intense coach on the field and off the field in conditioning. We were lifting for the first time in our lives. He showed us through that mentality what we were capable of. He and his 18-inch python arms showed us that it was OK to be intense and workout with a fury and a passion. We grew bigger, faster and stronger. We became driven. We became passionate. We became successful. We became men because of Coach Loiacano. And, it is such an honor to be inducted with him tonight. The amount of people who are here supporting him tonight is a tribute to what he created so many years ago."

In 1977, Gulfport went 11-1 and claimed the Big Eight title and the state championship. It remains the lone state championship in football Gulfport has attained.

Robert Hicks, a self-made athlete who was a 1,000-yard rusher, earned his GED and took his talent to Southeastern Louisiana University, commented, "We were taught so many life lessons under Coach Loiacano and his staff. We all continue to carry many of them to this day in our every day lines such as how we respond and face adversity, how we handle people and, most importantly, how to succeed. We carry these lessons solely because of what Coach Loiacano taught us. Tonight, it was evidence to everyone what effect his teaching and coaching have had with us and we love him for it."

Following his four years in Gulfport, Loiacano became the Strength and Conditioning coach for Mississippi State University. There, he continued his 'Bigger, Stronger, Faster' philosophy. He remained in Starkville for four years before returning home to Bay St. Louis where he opened and operated Loiacano's Health Club until Hurricane Katrina in 2005. With the health club, he tutored and molded generations of young athletes in that same philosophy.

Loiacano is a part of the sixth induction class of the Gulfport Sports Hall of Fame. He was enshrined along with his star quarterback at Gulfport East, Joseph Adams, who played at Tennessee State University and later with the San Francisco 49ers, S a s k a t c h e w a n Roughriders, Toronto Argonauts and Ottawa Rough Riders; Tommy Armstrong, who was a

Bert Jenkins and later served as President of the Mississippi Association of Coaches; Charlotte Banks, who led Harrison Central to a 40-0 record and state championship in basketball in 1988 and later played for Ole Miss and Venezuela and Finland, professionally; Dwayne Davis, who was a three-sport athlete who won five state championships and later played football for the University of Colorado; Tom Freeman, who coached football at Gulfport from 1978-89; Kenny Jimerson, who led Harrison Central to a state championship in basketball in 1982 and was later named a Parade All-American and Mississippi Player of the Year before playing at McNeese State; Elliott McGlory, who won two state titles in track and field and ran at Northeast Louisiana University; Buddy Palazzo, who was a three-sport athlete at Gulfport before playing football at USM; Gregory Lamar Reed, who won three state titles in track and field at Gulfport before playing football at USM and later the Dallas Cowboys; Tommy Snell, who coached St. John High School to five state titles in golf before taking over the MGCCC golf program; and Gerald Warfield, who was a two-sport athlete at Gulfport and later played for Ole Miss where he led the SEC with nine interceptions and was drafted by the Oakland Raiders in 1967.

Loiacano coached or mentored eight prior inductees to the Gulfport Sports Hall of Fame including Bill Bell (2015), Fred Collins (2015), Ronnie Cuevas (2015), Ricky Floyd (2015), Isaac Steven Williams (2016), Steve Smith (2017), Roman Grace (2017) and J. Phil Freightman (2018).

The evening belonged to 13 individuals along with family members and friends who came to support them. Loiacano received the loudest and most raucous applause of the evening. Would you expect nothing less for the man who poured his heart and soul into creating excellence among these men who still idolize the man they claim could 'strap it on' with them in practice.

The evening was such an anticipated one that even one of his two female managers from his years at Gulfport, Beverly Bush, came to support him.

Friends, family and former players let their voices be heard when Loiacano was announced for induction echoing once again what his former junior college coach told him decades ago - 'You have to prove your worth every time out.'

However, the real testament to J.E. Loiacano - the player, the coach, and the man - is the living monument of former players and coaches that will perpetuate his philosophy and teaching for generations to come. Congratulations, Coach Loiacano!

Our Lady Academy recognized students who earned individual scholarships for their academic excellence and outstanding leadership at the school's annual Award Ceremony on May 17, 2019.

The Mary Patricia Schmidt Scholarship is awarded to students whose characters exemplified such traits as Christian maturity, courage, dependability, service to others, sincerity, and stability.

The two recipients, rising 11th grade student Sophie Timmons and rising 7th grader Madelyn Prendergast will receive $2,500 each towards their continued education at OLA.

The Mary Alice Benvenuti Scholarship was started in 2013 to help provide every young woman who desires to receive a Catholic education the opportunity to do so.

This year's recipients are two rising 7th graders, Caroline Dufrene and Anastasia Nguyen. They will receive $2,500 each towards their education at OLA.

The Schoen Heier Bonura Scholarship was awarded to 8th grader Emily Kothman.

In 2007, OLA alumnae Schoen Heier Bonura and husband Ross Bonura established the scholarship fund as a means of helping a student continue her pursuit of a Catholic education at Our Lady Academy.

In the eleven years since the Schoen Heier Bonura Scholarship Fund was established, over $34,000 has been awarded.

The Marie L. Powers Scholarship was founded by her daughter, a former teacher from OLA, Marie Bartels. Marie Powers was a long-time volunteer at OLA and an ardent supporter of all-girls Catholic education.

The scholarship is awarded to underclassman, who by their daily actions and positive attitude demonstrate love and pride in OLA.

The 2019-20 recipient of this scholarship is Abigail McGehee. She will receive a $1500.00 scholarship towards her continued education at OLA.

The Furman Scholars scholarships recognize students that have a keen interest in liberal arts and science; a GPA of 3.5 or higher; a 29 or higher on the ACT; and significant involvement in community service and leadership. Recognized as Furman Scholars were juniors: Sophia Compretta, Elizabeth Elkins, Alma Hearin, Paige Palazzo and Savannah Templeton.

The Woodman Life Award was awarded to 8th grade student Caroline Maillho and rising senior Caroline Schafer for their outstanding proficiency in the study of American History.

The Saint Michael's Book Award was presented to two rising seniors, Allison Lyons and Macy Pigott for their commitment to leadership in volunteer service and academic achievement. St. Michael's College of Colchester, Vermont, recognizes outstanding students who demonstrate a commitment to volunteerism and leadership in their community.

Bay St. Louis Little Theatre Presents

“Twelve Angry Men”

SEA COAST ECHO

The Bay St. Louis Little Theatre will close another successful season with the popular, iconic play “Twelve Angry Men” by Reginald Rose, opening June 14th. Since its 2016 production, the praises and requests for a repeat performance have been constant. Because of the great reception by the community, the show is back by popular demand. From a 2016 Sun Herald review of the show, “...attending the BSLLT production of “Twelve Angry Men”...you won’t be disappointed. Most impressive, is how all twelve actors inhabit the scene from the opening to the final curtain, each one giving a masterful portrayal replete with detailed mannerisms....yielding both the vivid and mundane personalities you’d expect to see on an actual flesh and blood jury.”

The Little Theatre will be accepting new membership enrollment for its upcoming new season until September 29th.

“Twelve Angry Men” was a critically acclaimed teleplay which aired in 1954 and then adapted into a cinematic masterpiece in 1957 starring Henry Fonda. It is a blistering character study and an examination of the American melting pot and the judicial system that keeps it in check. A jury deliberates to decide the life-or-death fate of a young defendant. While the deliberations begin with the intentions to stay on point with just the evidence, soon the arguments become personal. Each juror reveals his own character as the various testimonies are re-examined, the murder is re-enacted, and a new murder threat is born. Tempers get short, arguments grow heated, and the jurors become twelve angry men.

The show is directed and produced by Cheryl Grace. The cast includes Barry Newman, Joey Bennett, Matt Issman, Paul Bernard, Irv Hansen, Jeff Cabe, Bruce Northridge, Bill Matkin, Robert Newton, Terry Cullen, Clayton Pennylegion, Bill Myers, George Bennett, and Jim Codling. Jen Coulter is set designer. Set construction is by Dean Noel and Jen Coulter. Jaden Sheffield is manager of sound and lights. Volunteer coordinator is Rachel Anderson. Stage manager is Maggie Wooten.

The show dates and times are June 14, 15, 21, 22 at 8pm and June 16 and 23 at 2pm. Doors open one hour before the show and seating starts 30 minutes before each show.

Tickets for the show can be purchased online at www.bsllt.org or purchased at Lulu’s at 126 Main Street or Bijoubel at 136 Main Street. Ticket fees are $18 adults, $10 Seniors 65+, veterans, military, and students with ID, and $8 for children 12 and under. Seat reservations can be made by calling 228-467-9024 or email the Little Theatre. Reservations for seats are recommended for all ticket holders including season ticket holders to be able to accommodate the show’s audiences. The Little Theatre accepts check or cash when paying for tickets at the door.
